Community Regrets Departure of the Saunders family

The whole community deeply regrets the departure of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Saunders and family for Calgary, where they intend to reside.

During the nine years which they have been in this district they have associated themselves with the better interests of our community. Mrs. Saunders did inestimable work with C.G.I.T. groups, having started the first group of its kind in Arrowwood. She was an untiring worker in the Sunday School and Church and also the Sunday School and officers and the Church Board, of which she was a member, regret very much the loss of such a willing worker. Mr. Saunders successfully organized and directed the choir of the United Church. We as a community, realize that their places will be hard to fill, not only in church work but in sport, of which they were enthusiastic followers, excelling in tennis and curling.

The community wishes to extend to the Saunders family their very best wishes for success and happiness in their new home.

Bible School to be Held in Arrowwood

Arrowwood will have a Bible School, And not long to wait. On November 6 this school will open in the Church of the Brethren. Rev. John Wiend of Arrowwood is to be in charge. So it was decided by a committee of nine, representing the several congregations of the Church of the Brethren in Saskatchewan and Alberta. This committee meeting was held at Irricana on Tuesday of this week. The decision of the committee is in accord with the decision passed by the District Conference convening at Kindersley in July. The Conference passed a resolution that a Bible School be begun this fall somewhere in the District. The Bible School will continue for six weeks. There will be one or two instructors in addition to Rev. Mr. Wiend. Courses will be offered in music, oral expression and teacher training in addition to those pertaining directly to the study of the Bible.

There will be no tuition charged. A small fee will be charged to cover incidental expenses, such as fuel and light. Efforts will be made to find suitable quarters for those coming from other places to live, boarding themselves. Thus no one will be prevented from attending because of expense.

Members of other denominations, or of none, will be welcome and receive the utmost courtesy. There is no age limit. Any may come who wish regardless of educational attainments.

SYNOPSIS
Camilla Hoy, young and beautiful, falls in love with Peter Anson, a new student in an art school. She is a spoiled daughter of a wealthy family, and he is a poor, struggling sculptor. On their first date, Peter spends most of his money to show Camilla a good time, and then decides to give her his last dollar. Camilla does not stand the financial pace. A chance meeting, however, paves the way for another date. This time they walk in the park. Camilla tells Peter that she is not rich, or, at least, will not inherit the Hoy fortune. Peter in turn confesses he is practically penniless. They fall into each other's arms.
(Now Go On With The Story.)

CHAPTER VIII.
When Camilla and Peter had graduated the weeks of their longing for love of each other with incoherent words and repeated kisses. Peter held her off and exclaimed, "To think how near I came to losing you! And I should have, if you had not told me the truth!"

"That was why I dared to tell you, because I was sure that when I did, it would be the end. There is no explaining the way things happen, that is there!"

Peter was silent for a minute, then turned aside from her suddenly and exclaimed, "But, Camilla, don't you see, dear—your not being Miss Hoy makes it all the more impossible for you to love me."

"What do you mean, Peter?" alarmed.
"Because I have no money, either. I can't take care of you—oh, for years—perhaps never. Mrs. Hoy is right—you must find someone to love who has plenty of money to take care of you."

"But didn't I just tell you that I was preparing to take care of myself?"
"Oh—that for awhile—yes. But you must think of your future."

"That is just what I am thinking of—what my future would be without love."

"Surely, there is someone you could care about who has money and influences that will give you the happiness you deserve?" He did not sound very convincing but he was trying to be generous.

"There is no one in the world who can make me happy, except you, Peter," she pressed her head close on his shoulder like a forlorn child seeking protection.

"Precious Camilla, you make me wild. If only I could make you happy!"

"You can if you love me enough," softly.

"Love you! I love you too much! But I can't take care of you. You are so long, and perhaps I never could give you what you have."

"Will you stop saying that, Peter?" she demanded severely. "I don't want the things I have had—ever. I want you—oh, Peter, darling, I love you so! Don't send me away from you!" Her hands reached up and clasped around his neck. Her lips lifted to his. Peter took them, eagerly, lost to all practical reasoning.

"They murmured together. 'I won't, darling, I promise. We'll find a way.' Presently, it was Camilla who drew away suddenly and exclaimed, "Why, Peter, it is you who should marry a girl with a fortune, so you can be free to study and work without worrying about money! That would mean everything to you. I'm sorry I forgot your side of it, Peter dear. I'll go away and take care of myself and find someone else." Now it was Camilla who tried to be cheerful and convincing and generous.

Peter drew her close to an indulgent laugh. "You precious little goose! What should I have to work for if I lost you? Having you would be my surest chance of success."

Camilla. "With you for my inspiration, the sky's the limit for me. We shall dream and work and dream and work. There are dreams in your eyes that promise me so much, darling. How we shall live together!"

"They are sweet!" she told him, timidly caressing his face.
"But I haven't told you all about me, dear. I have no family here, except some older brothers and sisters."

plans. Now I have you and want to do you into them from the beginning."

"Please tell me just what you had planned to do before you found me. Her tone was as matter-of-fact as if they were only new business partners."

"But that is the past—before I found you," Peter objected.

"Tell me, anyway," she insisted.

"Why, there was nothing very definite except that I was going to work very hard and sacrifice everything to succeed. I had planned to enter something in the National exhibit of 1905, and I had fallen to complete for the Paris scholarship. On the long chance that I won it, I hoped to make enough to pay my expenses over to a friend, and I had planned to go well—and Swedish and Scandinavian."

"I have Spanish and French and some Italian," Camilla added. "He might start a foreign language school."

"Or you could build a tower of Babel!"

"We'll tell the children do that," she reminded him, slyly.

Beautiful Indian Capital
Everything in Jalpur is Built on Fairyland Basis

has been in the limelight more than once of late, returns to it again by winning the Prince of Wales' Cup at Imphal, with his polo team. The native Jalpur sounds like an odd beauty found for everything there seems to be built on a fairyland basis. The houses in the capital are painted in every conceivable shade of pink and purple, delicately traced with patterns of other colors, and tiny green shutters are on every window. There are peacocks in the streets, and the royal stables near the palace are crowded with horses and elephants. A touch of realism is added by the Maharajah's private obelisk, but even it is unusual, for it contains the world's largest sundial.

Making Six-Year Tour
English Collecting Expeditions From Every Country in World

English collector Harold Hoggan, is engaged on the queerest world tour ever known, for he is journeying 35,000 miles in search of little-known recipes in order that he may add variety to Britain's culinary tastes.

Already he has visited Denmark, Germany, Ireland, Scotland, Norway and Sweden, and already his pockets are bulging with recipes which he has obtained in foreign lands.

After a short sojourn in Salford he is off to France, Italy, Spain, Turkey, South Africa, Australia, America and Canada, where he hopes to secure thousands of appetizing recipes.

His novel world search for recipes will take him six years—and at the end of the tour he will be the most knowledgeable chef in the world.

them, for awhile, just seeing each other when we can, then?"

"Not going to the Majestic and the Madison, Oh, Peter, that was terrible. You must let me pay you back the money you spent that night."

"Don't say that, dear. If I always had such pleasure from the money I spent at 'last' night, I'd get enough from life. Please don't mention it again."

"All right. But you must not spend your money on me again. We can walk and talk together in the park often, and have little picnics in the woods when you are not too busy."

So they planned confidentially, as only lovers who know little of the capricious life may dare, for to them the future always beckons along a straight shining road.

Cambridge Scientists
Return From Expedition

Bring New Species Of Animals and Reptiles From Jungle

Many animals, reptiles and insects hitherto unknown to man were discovered by three young Cambridge scientists who landed at Pongol, from an expedition into the unexplored jungle of the British Cameroons.

The adventures of T. D. Sanderson, G. Russell and H. F. Suter, members of the Percy Sladen expedition, have brought with them a collection of 200 new species in search of which they have penetrated into country hitherto untrod by white men.

The collection includes: A giant flying squirrel equipped with "parachutes" of varied colors by which they fly from tree to tree. A giant snake whose body is so species thought to have vanished ages ago.

A five-foot male gorilla. One hundred and fifty specimens of mammals. Thousands of rats, bats, frogs and spiders.

"A frog that is covered in hair and another that has claws. Mr. Sanderson stated that he had two gorillas, one of which died in captivity."

The natives, he said, are convinced that the gorilla is a "retrograde human being," with habits that are human, but they considered that the chimpanzee is definitely a monkey.

"In the Assam district," he added, "we discovered an uncharted mountain range, which appeared geologically to be of comparatively recent formation."

"Our most thrilling experience was when we were lost in thick virgin jungle. We were surrounded by impenetrable forest, and then one day we sensed rather than heard, the sound of native drumming, and by following for a day and a night we came to a native village and so found ourselves again."

String Illusion
Telescope Convicted People Man They Saw Was Not Flagpole Sitter

A flag-pole sitter in Montreal seen by the police, but the office staff of one of the upper stories of the Aldred Building were sure that they saw a person seated on a stool atop a flag-pole.

For many minutes the amazed audience gazed intently at this new spectacle. Only after a powerful telescope was sent for did they discover their mistake. The telescope revealed a man sitting on a stool on the roof of a building beyond the one which supported the pole. Strangely enough from all sides optical illusion caused the man to appear to be seated on the flag-pole. He sat still for more than 30 minutes and this added to the deception.

Waterspout Chases Ship
Huge Volume Of Water Follows Liner

A Five Miles A Waterspout playing tag with an ocean liner was the adventure experienced by passengers on the ship of Bedford during a violent wind storm. The liner was on her way down the St. Lawrence from Montreal to New York on a cruise.

The giant spout, which measured 60 feet across the base and at times as much as 500 feet in height, followed the liner for almost five miles at a speed of approximately 17 miles per hour, passengers reported.

Accurate Summing Up
Motor speed law was thus summed up in a court of appeal in connection with a court case arising as the result of a motor car accident: This court has said three times, and I want it to be generally known, that if you are going at such a speed that you cannot pull up within the limits of your vision, and an accident happens, you are in the wrong."

Retirement Well Earned
Two Sisters Served As Missionaries For 35 Years

Coral stone church on scattered South Sea islands and the Hibiscus and other Christmas Island and school textbooks translated into Kusaian—these are some of the results of the work of two American sisters who started out from Newark, N.J., 35 years ago and now have just been retired.

The sisters are the Misses Elizabeth and Jane Halpin, and their retirement was voted by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

For 35 years the sisters were the only white persons on the small island, Kusaian, on which they lived. They nursed the islanders through sickness, remained with them through hundreds of furious tropical storms, and helped them through succeeding famines.

After translating school books with their own hands the sisters prepared them for printing. Books were laboriously cut out on an old hand press until, on their twenty-fifth anniversary in the islands, a machine press was sent from Boston.

Everything has been done or planned by the two women. Thus, when a centennial reservoir and typhoon house was built, Miss Elizabeth supervised the erection here.

Members of the First Presbyterian Church at Newark, they sailed to the islands first under the American Board of Missions, now united with the American Board. In all their years in the islands they never had accepted of any other denomination.

Only once have they visited America, in 1911. Miss Elizabeth, who was with them when she left America, is now 74 and nearly blind. Miss Jane, who was only 25 when she sailed is now 60.

HOW FRAIL IS BEAUTY
How frail is beauty? The swiftest of dancing shadows, The willows bending low, The jade and emerald water, The blue-faded, breaking waves—The frail thing is beauty!

That a life can save!
O, beauty let me clasp you And hold you close always— For morning's golden haze: Never your still reflection Upon the sleeping lake And greet me with the twilight When starry beads awake!

A gleam, a hint, a promise A sunset's fleeting glow; For frail is beauty That a life can mold!

Little Helps For This Week
"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God; how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!"—Romans 11:33.

No star is ever lost we once have seen. We always may be what we might have been. Since good, though only thought, has life and breath, God's life always is redeemed from death.

And expect its nature is decay. And any hour can blot it all away: The hopes that lost in some far distance sleep, May be the truer life, and this the dream.

—A. A. Proctor.
St. Bernard has said: "Man if thou dost wish to be happy, ceaselessly praying to God for it, if thou continue constant in this desire, it will be granted to thee without fail. And if God has not given it to thee, thou shalt find it in Him in eternity; it is thus assured." Therefore do not relinquish your desire, though it be not fulfilled immediately, or though you may swerve from your aspirations or even forget them for a while. The voice of inspiration which once excited life forever before God, and in Him ye shall find the fruit thereof, that is, to all eternity, it shall be better for you than if you had never felt them. —J. Tauler.

Around Arrowwood

Mr. and Mrs. Dettler left on Monday for Calgary, proceeding the next day to Seattle where they will spend a week with Mr. Dettler's brother, after which they will depart for their home at La Verne, Cal. Mr. Dettler has been in the district during harvest looking after his farm interests.

As evidence of what can be grown in the fertile soil of the Arrowwood district, with irrigation and little or no moisture, this week Mr. Geo. Duncan brought into the Resource office a fine sample of tubers grown in his garden. Some of them weighed 3 lbs. and 3 ounces. The circumference one way measured 21 inches and the other 11 inches.

On Wednesday last a group of enthusiastic home building women gathered at the home of Mrs. Paul Norton, the occasion celebrated a shower in honor of Mrs. John L. Brubaker. A few interesting games were indulged in, after which a luncheon, which delighted the assemblage, was served. A fitting climax was witnessed by presenting Mrs. Brubaker with many useful and valuable gifts.

Sunday School will be held in the Trego School, Mossleigh, at 10 o'clock Sunday afternoon. All welcome.

Traffic earnings of the Canadian railways for July show an aggregate gain of nearly a million dollars as compared with July, 1932, the best showing in many months on similar comparisons. Gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific account for $475,000 of this gain during the month.

"He got you that time," said Mrs. Montague Norman to the governor of the Bank of England, when they landed recently at Quebec from Canadian Pacific liner, Duchess of Athol, on their way to Har Harbor, Maine. The purpose of the visit is a mystery, not even a holiday being admitted by the distinguished visitor.

Hunting

Go out of Arrowwood in the morning on any road and you are sure to find several coveys of Hungarian Partridge, which makes shooting a plenty. Then the Bow River and irrigation ditch attract plenty of water fowl and later the geese come and feed in the stubble fields. Truly this field is the hunter's paradise.

Winter means sluggish motors—to add to your winter travel pleasure, let us supply you with a new Exide battery. You will be delighted with the results and remember "when it's an Exide you start."

Motor lubrication is fundamentally essential, cold weather makes this difficult unless the proper grade of motor oil is used. Why not, before the mercury does drop to zero, drive in and let us drain and refill your crank case with the proper motor oil to insure your winter driving comfort and economy.

Remember—Hauling is our specialty, with which we use Service as a motto. Promptness as a guide word and Satisfaction a definite goal.

The owner of a small store whose premises had been burned last Friday.

"A terrible affair, I am ruined. I am ruined. I just stood there helpless, watching it burn. My face got white, white, white—white as your shirt." Then, looking at his friend's shirt, he added: "Whiter!"

The New Goodrich Safety Silvertown

WITH LIFE-SAVER GOLDEN FLY

We were certainly amazed when we saw the tests on this new tire. We hardly thought it possible for any tire company to make a tire that would stand up under heat and continuous wear and abuse the way this one does.

In addition to all its other features of safety and durability, every new Goodrich Safety Silvertown has the amazing new Life-Saver Golden Fly. It resists terrific heat. Fabric and rubber don't separate. Blister don't form inside the tire. Blow-outs are prevented. Drop in today and let us show you the correct selection of an amazing new tire. It costs no more than other standard tires.
